Greg Clancy

His subject

World War 2 Spy in the ABC, 1938-1939

Family history related by his father when he was only 11 years old was the reason for his interest in spies and espionage.

An accountant for most of his working life with a personal interest in history, geography and historical biographies led him to write books on multiculturalism and people smuggling, and now on a spy who was a media identity on the ABC in 1938 and 1939. Access to public broadcasts to nationwide audiences gave the spy a secure channel to transmit coded messages and be involved in more underhand activities. The spy's time in Australia was immersed in intrigue and shielded by a skillfully managed façade of deception.

The topic of his talk relates to his latest book.

Come along and hear this intriguing story.
